Utilities privatizing

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

Fort Jackson residents and employees might soon see various local utility companies providing services such as water, sewer and electricity.

Because owning and operating utility systems is not a core function of the Department of Defense, the Utilities Privatization program looks to turn over Department of Defense systems to industry experts.

The intent, according to the Defense Energy Support Center's 2003 Request for Proposal, is to "obtain safe, reliable and efficient utility services for Army installations."

The DoD directed that all service-owned electric, natural gas, water and wastewater utility systems to be privatized unless security concerns required federal ownership or if privatization is not economical. Where not economical, systems will be recapitalized using traditional funding sources such as the operations and maintenance and military construction appropriations.

Fort Jackson has been evaluated and is privatizing two systems, said Mike Munn, maintenance program manager, Directorate of Logistics and Engineering.

"We're in the process of awarding water and wastewater contracts," Munn said. "We anticipate a January '07 award, and there's a 120-day transition period from the notice of

Post landfill cleaned up; more work planned

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

A Fort Jackson landfill, deemed by the federal government to be an environmental hazard, has been cleaned up and the land restored to its natural state.

The Range 17 Landfill, located near the intersection of Hartsville Guard and Old Hartsville Guard roads, was closed in 1989 and used up until that point to dispose of debris from road construction and barracks demolition.

"We have gone through several phases of investigation for environmental impact and didn't find much. Nothing hazardous has been found. Mostly solid waste," said Lahiri Estaba, Fort Jackson Environmental Restoration Program manager.

The Environmental Protection Agency, however, mandated Fort Jackson clean up the site as well as clean five other former landfills.

Debris, which consisted mostly of concrete and metal, was trucked onto the 15-acre site and dumped on the surface and into pits.

Removing the debris was no easy task, said Lahiri. To remove the concrete and metal, several trees had to be cut down.

"As an environmentalist it is an oxymoron to cut down trees, but we had to cut them down to take out the waste," he said. The trees were turned into mulch.

The concrete removed from the site has been recycled and was ground up for restoration work at similar sites. Because the concrete was in a landfill and deemed unusable by the EPA, the post is unable to use the concrete for other projects such as road construction.

"Here at Fort Jackson we really strive to restore, conserve and recycle," Lahiri said.

Once the debris was removed from the site, workers placed a two-foot layer of soil cover on the site.

In addition to cleanup, the post is required by the EPA to monitor the groundwater underneath the former landfill for possible contamination. A well will be dug on the site this month and water sampling will be conducted to ensure there is no contamination.

Lahiri said the post is currently working to clean up the additional five landfills located across Fort Jackson that total 500 acres.

Ask the Garrison Commander

Library available for Internet use; chain of custody

Col. Eddie Stephens Jr.

Q Is there anywhere on post to use the Internet for e-mail, safety training or to conduct research for classes?

A The Fort Jackson Thomas Lee Hall Library has just upgraded its computer lab with 15 new computers. In the 2006 fiscal year the library had more than 30,000 users. These users used the Internet for checking e-mail (Army Knowledge Online), anti-terrorism training, safety training, driver's training and library research of all kinds. On AKO, users can access the Army's library page — found under self service by clicking on my library — to search seven databases at one time, including more than 3,600 periodicals, to enhance research or to read a book online. All this is free to users at the library located at the corner of Strom Thurmond Boulevard and Lee Road. The hours of operation are from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., Monday through Thursday, and from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., Friday through Sunday.

Q What is meant by chain of custody of a urinalysis?

A The chain of custody is the physical possession of specimen that is kept under direct observation by an observer or qualified noncommissioned officer until a physical changeover is made with another Army Substance Abuse Program staff noncommissioned officer. The only person that signs the chain of custody prior to turning it into the Installation Biochemical Testing Coordinator is the Unit Prevention Leader.

Garrison Fact of the Week

Remembering Harvey — the last of the great newspaper men

Theresa O'Hagan
Contributing Writer

My friend, my colleague, one of the last "old school" journalists died last week. I first met Harvey Moss, whose official title was "managing editor, Fort Jackson Leader," when I was a private first class assigned to the Public Affairs Office in 1995.

Harvey's official title really didn't cover the scope of this job. Most people saw him as the "advertising guy for the Leader." Sure, he was the head of the advertising sales department, but he was also the man who watched over the paper after all the stories and photos were laid out. He stayed with the paper as it went from dummy sheets to plates, to film to newsprint sheets and finally, the finished product.

By some twist of fate, I became the Leader editor after less than one year on staff. For a month, I would wake up in a state of panic — "Oh, God did I make that change on page 3?"

It was during this trial by fire that Harvey became more than the man "who put the ads in the paper." He became my friend, my colleague, my mentor.

He taught me how space to leave between the photo and the cutline, the headline and the body of the story. He refined my copy fitting skills — tedious math that was a part of newspapers in the "dark ages." I finally understood what "six down" meant — the amount of space filled by an article measured from the top of the page to the bottom of the last line of type. He helped me lay out my very first double truck, the two facing pages in the center of a newspaper.

We discussed ideas for special editions, front pages, layout changes ... his enthusiasm for newspapers was contagious. We did special inserts for the holidays, for special events and for post history. We had the time of our lives and put out some real good papers.

After more than four years as the editor, it was my time to move on ... albeit, I did not go far. I moved a few blocks away to Morale, Welfare and Recreation and happily for me, I still got to work with Harvey — this time with ads.

Harvey was always smiling, always willing to do whatever he could to make everyone happy.

Harvey was physically the most opposite anyone could be to me — male, tall (nearly 7 feet) rail thin, conservative and reserved. I, on the other hand was female, 5-foot-2-inches, definitely not rail thin, eccentric and boisterous. On the inside, however, in our journalistic hearts, we were kindred spirits.

As often as possible, (and this was never often enough because to call Harvey a workaholic doesn't even begin to cover it), Harvey and I would go to lunch together. We would go to some new place that just opened; usually somewhere Harvey wanted me to try. We both loved food. His fast metabolism filled me with envy. Over steaming bowls of pasta, or on one special occasion giant bowls of ice cream, we would talk about journalism, ethics, the Patriot Act, the loss of civility in American society. We talked for hours. When I was having a bad day in journalism, Harvey was the only person I could talk to who could empathize with my frustration and offer helpful advice.

Years of working together forged a great bond of friendship.

Harvey's death made me realize, as close as we were, I knew so little about him. He was very private and I never wanted to pry. I knew his father was not doing well, and living in Raleigh. I knew he had brothers and sisters up north. He had a nephew and niece-in-law who visited often. They had a labradoodle that was Harvey's "grandnephew" and he always looked forward to the grandnephew's visits, which he prepared for with dog biscuits and squeaky toys. I know he never married.

Harvey Moss

I suppose I don't know the little everyday things about Harvey, but I know the important ones. I know he was my true friend. I know he loved me. I know I love him and I miss him so much already.

Editor's note: For 25 years, Harvey Moss was the liaison between the Fort Jackson Leader and its contract publisher. His primary mission was to ensure the newspaper was published on time, delivered to the right places and the advertisers were happy. He was often seen in and around the community, but to those who did not know his name, he was "the Leader guy." For the Public Affairs Office and many others around Fort Jackson, Harvey was part of the family and we will miss him very much.

BCT Soldiers issued Army's newest tools

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

The war in Iraq is different from other campaigns. There are different challenges, tactics and landscapes that require different types of equipment.

In the Army's largest equipment fielding effort since World War II, the Rapid Fielding Initiative is dedicated to protecting Soldiers and enhancing their quality of life in the field by providing the most up-to-date technological equipment available. So far, more than 600,000 active and reserve troops have been equipped, including Basic Combat Training Soldiers at Fort Jackson.

The RFI was created in 2003, based on lessons learned during the deployment of combat troops to Afghanistan in 2002.

The first RFI kits contained only 14 items. Current RFI kits contain 58 items, with plans to add additional items in the future.

Some of the items already included are improved spotting scopes, ballistics spectacles, the advanced combat helmet and Modular Lightweight Load-Carrying Equipment, which consists of removable compartments and components. There is also improved personal equipment such as socks, boots and moisture-wicking T-shirts.

The RFI operates out of the Program Executive Office Soldier program at Fort Belvoir, Va. Since March, RFI kits have been issued to BCT Soldiers at Fort

Jackson. Though these kits contain fewer items than the ones issued in theatre, they familiarize Soldiers with the gear they'll be using.

Other items issued here are:

- ° Desert knee/elbow pads
- ° Land Operations Goggles
- ° Hydration System (Navy personnel only)
- ° Infrared markers (Navy personnel only)

"This allows us to train Soldiers as they have to fight," said Henry Geathers, logistics chief, Directorate of Logistics and Engineering. "By having the RFI here, they're used to items such as the combat helmet and Improved First-Aid Kit when they get to Iraq — this won't be their first time seeing these."

PEO Soldier, Accessions Command unveil traveling exhibit

Rich Lamance
Army News Service

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 7 — A new traveling exhibit designed to help connect the American public to the American Soldier was unveiled amid the pageantry of the Army's Fan Fiesta exhibition, culminating with the Army-sponsored "All-American" Bowl high school all-star football contest played last Saturday at the Alamodome.

The U.S. Army Accessions Command, in conjunction with the U.S. Army Program Executive Office (PEO) Soldier, took the wraps of their newest interactive recruiting tool, the American Soldier Adventure Van.

The van highlights the Army's most technologically advanced equipment and celebrates the Soldier as the heart of the Army.

"The van shows the American public how the American Soldier is outfitted with the best equipment possible to carry out its missions in the 21st Century," said Sgt. Maj. Thomas Coleman with PEO Soldier in Boston, Mass.

The van will travel throughout the country about 270 days a year, providing interactive demonstrations, video displays and examples of weapons, clothing and gear of the future being planned for the Soldier of today.

The van was developed to, not only help generate leads for recruiting, but to also give the American public an awareness of the clothing, weapons and equipment being quickly fielded to help protect Soldiers' lives in areas of potential danger.

Other hands-on areas of the exhibit include such things as interceptor body armor and helmets and extended cold weather gear, new target sensor technology and the ability to view a simulated battlefield using new night vision devices and thermal weapon sights.

New insurance helps with long-term care

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

With nursing home and home-care costs expected to rise in the coming years, it makes sense for Soldiers and other government employees to plan ahead for long-term care, and to integrate that planning into their total financial or retirement plan.

Tom Bebbington, public relations manager for the relatively-new Federal Long-Term Care Insurance Program, said most health insurance programs provide little or no coverage for long-term care services.

"Planning ahead for these high costs is absolutely critical to preserving your nest egg, your estate plan and your personal independence," Bebbington said.

He said the FLTCIP underscores the importance of early long-term care planning and gives members the opportunity to apply for substantial long-term care coverage at favorable group premiums.

Established by an act of Congress in 2000 and overseen by the U.S. Office of Personnel Management, the FLTCIP is designed to meet the specific needs of the federal family. It also provides care coordination services to qualified relatives of enrollees at no cost, Bebbington said.

"When you need long-term care services, securing the best type and quality of care can seem daunting," said Mary Lou McGuinness, a registered nurse and director of care coordination and claims for the FLTCIP. "That's why the care coordination services provided by the only federally-sponsored long-term care insurance program are truly one of the hallmarks of the program."

Bebbington said the best time to consider buying long-term care insurance is long before it is needed.

"The younger you are when you purchase coverage, the less expensive your monthly or annual premiums will be," said Bebbington. "Waiting not only means a larger cash outlay, it means you'll be a greater risk of having pre-existing health problems that may prevent you from qualifying."

Coverage under the FLTCIP is backed by the John Hancock and Metropolitan Life Insurance companies, due to the companies' consistently earned high ratings for financial strength and operating performance. The program is administered by Long Term Care Partners, LLC, a company created exclusively for the program and jointly owned by the carriers. OPM has worked closely with John Hancock and MetLife to ensure this coverage offers the kind of benefits and features that are most valuable — now and in the future — to members of the federal family.

Bebbington said the FLTCIP offers enrollees some distinct advantages, including comprehensive coverage, competitive and stable rates, international coverage, and administrative service standards that are the highest in the long-term care insurance industry.

"The program's policies are simple to understand and offer benefits tailored to federal family members," Bebbington said. "Policies are sold direct through highly trained, non-commissioned staff that understands how long-term care insurance works and how to recommend the right coverage. There are no high pressure sales tactics, simply sound advice."

award to the contractor being in responsible charge."

Munn said the electric system has been deferred until fiscal year 2008, and it has been determined that privatizing gas at this time would be uneconomical, but that it would be reviewed again.

He expects better quality from both water and sewer systems once they are contracted.

"Privatization is expected to bring our system up to standards to meet regulatory requirements," Munn said. "It will improve our quality of water and should minimize disruptions in services. We have been under-funded for years and have deferred maintenance."

Of the Army's 351 Continental U.S. systems, 118 have been privatized, 158 have been deemed uneconomical to privatize and 75 are under evaluation. Evaluations are expected to be completed by September 2011.

The Privatization program does not include overseas utility systems, which are generally owned by the host nation.

Court martial results

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate U.S. v. Pvt. Robert M. Zima

On Jan. 3, a military judge sitting as a special court martial sentenced Pvt. Robert M. Zima, Company D, 187th Ordnance Battalion, to eight months incarceration, reduction to the lowest enlisted rank and a bad-conduct discharge.

Zima plead guilty to one charge and four specifications of larceny and one charge and one specification of false official statement during the special court martial.

Nov. 17, Zima used a metal bar taken from a broken wall locker to break open combination locks on other Soldiers' lockers within Co. D, 187th

Ord. Bn.

Zima broke into four wall lockers and stole two laptop computers and two Sony PlayStation Portable game systems.

Zima was escorted on Jan. 4 to the confinement facility at Fort Knox, Ky. Final action by the general court martial convening authority is pending.

Customer Service Corner

Fort Jackson action council convenes

Vincent Valenzuela

Customer Management Services Senior Analyst

Fort Jackson's Customer Management Services Action Council convened Jan. 4. The name of the council was changed based on the evolution of the three-tiered feedback process which encompasses individuals, constituent groups (Soldiers, retirees, veterans, family members and civilian employees), and mission commanders supported by the U.S. Army Garrison.

The council convenes on a quarterly basis to discuss Interactive Customer Evaluation system, Community FIRST, and corporate assessment feedback submitted by the community. During this meeting the council discussed and resolved issues, concerns and recommendations submitted by the Fort Jackson community during the 2007 fiscal year first quarter.

The Customer Management Services office is responsible for administering the three feedback mechanisms designed to gather, analyze and report information that is essential to improve services provided by the garrison.

The first tier is ICE, which is used for individual feedback on the 250 service providers on Fort Jackson. The installation finished with a 93 percent satisfaction level and more than 4,000 responses during the 2007 fiscal year first quarter.

The second tier is the Community FIRST Quarterly Issue Resolution Process used for constituent group feedback to submit issues that cannot be fixed by ICE. There were a total of 62 issues submitted during the 2007 fiscal year first quarter (18 submitted from people through their CMSAC representatives; six submitted through the Surviving Spouses Focus Group; 21 submitted through the Civilian Employee Focus Group; and 17 submitted through the Family Member Focus Group).

The CMSAC reviews all active and completed issues for the current quarter. Active issues are discussed and resolved during the council if they are within the control of the installation. Others may require forwarding to higher levels. Votes are taken to determine if an issue should be recommended for forwarding to the commanding general. The CG makes the final determination on forwarding issues beyond Fort Jackson.

There were several issues voted to be presented to the CG for forwarding beyond Fort Jackson. These issues and all other issues submitted to Community FIRST can be found on the Fort Jackson Well-Being Web site and will be discussed in further articles of the "Customer Service Corner" (formerly known as the Well-Being Corner).

The third tier of feedback is the semi-annual corporate assessment. This assessment is designed to gather feedback from mission commander and unit leadership on performance, importance and priority of services provided. The ratings are then provided to garrison directorates for evaluation and development of action plans to improve services, if required. The CMS Office will be conducting briefings with the mission commanders and unit leadership during January and February. The briefings will consist of 2006 fiscal year assessment results and the details of the upcoming corporate assessment in March 2007.

The CMS three-tiered feedback process has been implemented at Fort Jackson, S.C., Fort Eustis, Va., and Fort Richardson, Alaska. This process will soon be implemented at other Army locations.

The issues and responses submitted during this quarter will be discussed at the next Customer Management Services Action Council scheduled for 2 p.m., March 1 at the Post Conference Room.

The community is invited to attend the council meeting and present questions and comments. If you have any questions or concerns to address to the Fort Jackson leadership, this would be a great opportunity to let your voice be heard.

You can contact the CMS Office at 751-5547 or DSN 734-5547, with questions. For a detailed list of issues submitted through the Community FIRST initiative visit the Fort Jackson Well-Being home page at: <http://www.jackson.army.mil/WellBeing/wellbeing.htm>

ICE Appreciation

The garrison would like to congratulate the Fort Jackson Civilian Personnel Advisory Center, and the Installation Safety Office. They have maintained a 4.88 and a 4.87 percent rating, respectively, in employee/staff attitude out of a possible 5.0, for a 12-week period. This is an outstanding performance in customer satisfaction. Keep up the good work.

Mission First

Safety Always

Spotlight on Safety

Congratulations! We have come to the end of Block Leave, and all members of the Fort Jackson community returned safely. This is an excellent achievement and was only possible because every one of you did your part.

Unfortunately, the threat remains very real. During the 2006 fiscal year, 16 Soldiers died in privately owned vehicle accidents in the Training and Doctrine Command. In the 2007 fiscal year first quarter, TRADOC has lost eight Soldiers in POV accidents. Excessive speed and alcohol were contributing factors in many of the POV accidents involving TRADOC Soldiers. Army-wide accident statistics paint a similar picture.

Safety Tip of the Week

DUIs are on the rise — six of them in December. Always remember that other options are available.

° All Fort Jackson military organizations are required to produce a calling card with numbers that Soldiers can call in case they have had too much to drink, or for other emergencies. If you do not have one, contact your chain of command.

° If you are using the Fort Jackson club system, all you need to do is tell the bar staff that you have had too much to drink and you will be given a free cab ride home — no questions asked.

° Designated drivers are another option, and most clubs have some sort of program. The Fort Jackson clubs will provide the designated driver with free non-alcoholic drinks.

Drinking and Driving is simply unacceptable, so do the right thing. The life you save might just be your own.

Minnesotan trades crown for cammies

Samantha L. Quigley

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9, 2007 — A 22-year-old college student recently traded her beauty-queen tiara for the Kevlar helmet she'll wear when she deploys with her Minnesota Army National Guard unit to Iraq.

For the past six months, Jessica Gaulke's life has been about college classes and making appearances as Minneapolis' 2007 Aquatennial Queen of the Lakes, but soon it will focus on helping lead Iraq to a peaceful democracy.

The Augsburg College senior studying sociology will be deploying as Spc. Jessica Gaulke with the 2nd Battalion, 147th Assault Helicopter Battalion. The unit is scheduled to start training at Fort Hood, Texas, this spring in advance of a yearlong tour in Iraq.

"I'm feeling strong to go. The training I've received is good training, and I'm prepared," Gaulke said. But her military obligation, which she accepted in February 2002 when she joined the National Guard, has ended her rein as Queen of the Lakes.

Although it was never her lifelong ambition to win a beauty pageant, she said the abbreviated experience has been wonderful. So, although she admits it was bitter-sweet to hand over her crown Jan. 4, she said she feels no resentment.

"I've heard this whole time that, 'You could go. You never know when you're going to go, but you could go at any time and they don't even have to give you notice,'" Gaulke said. "I'm thankful for the six months that I've had (as Queen of the Lakes).

Of course, I would have liked to finish the year out, but what I've experienced has been amazing."

During the six months as Aquatennial Queen of the Lakes, she juggled her National Guard drill duties and schoolwork with her public appearances, she said.

"I do it pretty well, actually. I've had to do a couple of changes in my car going from drill to parades," Gaulke said. "I think maybe this is changing the whole outlook on the pageant system and scholarship programs because it's not all about the glitz and glam.

"It's really about the person you are," she said. "Sometimes I don't look the best, but people understand."

Although she's been dubbed the "Brave Beauty," Gaulke said she won her crown based on who she is. "There's no swimsuit, there's no gown or fishbowl questions, things like that we normally see in Miss America," she said. "It's based on your school, your volunteer experience, what you're active in currently."

Gaulke carries a 3.3 grade point average and volunteers as a coach for her high school lacrosse team in the spring. She also works with the Minneapolis-based Open Arms, an organization that makes and delivers meals for residents with HIV/AIDS.

For the down-to-earth beauty queen, trading her crown for cammies is no big deal. "Switching one for the other ... I signed up for it and I knew it was a possibility," Gaulke said.

There's another major life event on the near horizon that makes giving up her crown to head to Iraq seem easy in comparison. "I'm getting married next week," she said, adding that her newlywed husband, whom she'll be leaving behind soon, will take care of their two dogs and the new home the couple just purchased.

"I'm excited and I think life is bringing me in the right direction," she said. "Things happen for a reason."

New governance will improve military health care system, official says

Sgt. Sara Wood

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 — The new governance plan for the military health care system, which is in its very early stages, will improve the care given to troops and their families in today's joint environment, the Defense Department's top health official said today.

The idea behind the new governance plan is to have the separate military services work together even more closely than they do now in the area of health care. This will improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the system, Dr. William Winkenwerder Jr., assistant secretary of defense for health affairs, said in an interview at the Pentagon.

"Our system does work well now; we have great outcomes in battlefield medicine and in the care of our wounded — the best in history," Winkenwerder said. "But we have a vision, we have a clear set of ideas that things can work even better."

The new governance plan was approved by Deputy Defense Secretary Gordon England on Nov. 27, 2006. It calls for joint oversight and leadership of several key functional areas across the health system, such as education and training, medical research, and health care delivery.

Under the new plan, large local markets that serve more than one branch of the military will have a unified authority, Winkenwerder explained. This will allow for better decision making, increased cost effectiveness and shared resources, he said.

The Defense Department will consolidate medical education and training at a new center in San Antonio, and it will also consolidate medical research. Any research that is unique to a specific service will be preserved, Winkenwerder added.

"One of the things that we wanted to do was to not break anything that works well today; we don't think we're going to do that at all," he said.

DoD health care has already consolidated in one area — information technology. Winkenwerder praised the new electronic medical records system, AHLTA, the "Armed Forces Health Longitudinal Technology Application," which is used by all services at all military treatment facilities.

"We have the chance to do that kind of thing in other areas, and that's what the new governance plan is about," he said.

The new governance plan will not create a new joint command with one surgeon general, Winkenwerder explained. The services will maintain their separate surgeons general, he said, but major changes in governance will happen across the board.

The new governance system will require a transition process, Winkenwerder said. Details of the plan still need to be worked out, and a transition team will be appointed to map the execution of the plan, which is expected to be complete by 2009.

Key goals of the new plan are to save taxpayer dollars and improve the health care given to troops and their families, Winkenwerder said.

He praised the services for their cooperation and compromise in developing the plan, and expressed optimism about the success of the plan.

"Ultimately, all of this needs to be about producing a better product, producing a better result, all in the interest of our service members and their families," he said. "They deserve the best that we can provide them, and that's the goal of all this."

MWR has solutions to New Year's resolutions

Theresa O'Hagan

Morale, Welfare and Recreation

You did it again, didn't you? Resolved to be better this year. Maybe lose weight? Eat better? Exercise more?

Most people who "fail" to stick to their New Year's resolutions do so because they don't have adequate support. Everyone needs a friend to help get them motivated.

Andy's Fitness Center is offering special pricing and packages to help you (and a buddy) stick to an exercise program. Andy's memberships have been reduced by 32 percent and patrons can purchase a one-year membership or renew a current membership for only $75. Get the entire family involved for just $125. The renewed membership will start when the current one expires.

If you want to bring a buddy or buddies with you — purchase a pack of 12, one-month memberships, also for $75. Buddies who are not MWR eligible need to be accompanied by an eligible patron. (Won't you feel guilty if your buddy can't stick to his or her work-out routine because you're not there?)

To sweeten the pot a little more, if you purchase a new membership or renew by Monday, you will be entered in a drawing to receive a $100 gift certificate from Foot Locker or Lady Foot Locker.

For more information on Andy's Fitness Center call 751-4056.

Weight management tips for a healthier you

Col. James Mundy

Q It seems that I have picked up a few extra pounds over the holiday season. What can I do to shed the pounds quickly, but safely?

A Despite popular beliefs, the healthiest way to lose weight is by eating healthier and exercising.

Here are some tips to a healthier you:

- Begin a consistent exercise routine. No excuses for not exercising, but be sure to check with your doctor first.
- Eat smaller portions and understand the portion sizes of all foods.
- Eat three meals per day; do not skip meals.
- Increase fiber: eat whole grains and less refined carbohydrates.

- Increase veggies to three or more servings per day.
- Increase fruits to two-to-three servings per day.
- Decrease or avoid sweetened beverages (regular soda, fruit drinks, sweet tea, sports drinks, Kool-Aid or lemonade.)
- Decrease fast food and restaurant dining.
- Keep a food diary for at least one week.
- Measure foods so that you know what one serving looks like.
- Decrease excess consumption of junk foods, such as cookies, cakes, pies, candy, doughnuts, pastries, chips, crackers and soda. Save these items for special occasions and even then watch the portion sizes.
- Decrease excess fats that are in fast food, fatty cuts of meat, full fat dairy products, chips, desserts, butter, margarine, cream, high-fat salad dressings, sauces and gravies.
- Use small amounts of healthy fats, such as olive or canola oil, avocados, nuts, seeds, fatty fish like salmon, mackerel, albacore tuna, sardines, herring and fat found in soy products. Do not eliminate total fat.

Tips to feel full:

- Eat more fiber and drink more water.
- Eat more veggies or start a meal with a broth based soup.
- Slow down when eating and wait 20 minutes before going for seconds.

Fad diets:

Don't diet. Diets are short term and to lose weight permanently you must change your eating habits.

Herbal weight loss supplements can be dangerous because many can interact with different supplements or prescription medications. Beware of emotional eating and other stimulants to eating and make sure to eat only when you are truly hungry.

Archaeologists uncover truths of Iraq dead

Al Dooley

Corps of Engineers, St. Louis Div. Public Affairs

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 8 — U.S. Army Corps of Engineers archaeologist Dr. Michael “Sonny” Trimble has been to Iraq five times in the last two years, for a total of 17 months.

He hasn’t gone there to shed light on the ancient history of what many people call the cradle of civilization. Rather, he’s gone there to lead an effort to gather and document accurate evidence and decisively tell the story of hundreds of thousands of Iraqis allegedly murdered by Saddam Hussein and his regime over the last two decades.

“I want to give his victims their voices,” Trimble said. “I want them to be able to tell the world what happened to them.”

Trimble has led a team of archaeologists, forensic anthropologists, photographers, collections managers, archivists, and a broad range of other specialists to sort, catalog and preserve exhumed items for future applications.

The team also included a legal specialist to ensure the results would be “air tight” legal records of events and findings.

Their work, for the Justice Department’s Regime Crimes Liaison Office in Baghdad has turned up a lot of details. Searching in mass graves, the team found and meticulously documented more than just skeletons.

Due to the soil’s nature in much of Iraq, victims’ clothing with its original colors, toys and even official identity documents have been preserved and recovered.

“We’ve gained a great respect for these people — not simply as remains, which we of course, handled with great care — but as the people they were when they lived,” Trimble said.

Trimble journeyed to Iraq one more time recently. This time, on Nov. 30 he sat in a witness chair for four hours at the trial of Saddam Hussein, who was being tried with several other Baath Party officials in the Anfal trial.

During Trimble’s testimony, the deposed dictator, other defendants and defense attorneys scrutinized him intensely.

Trimble firmly delivered a detailed report of findings from investigating mass graves of Kurdish people from northern Iraq, who were put to death following alleged insurrection there.

The defendants, including Hussein, questioned Trimble for an hour.

The defendants had long stated these were legitimate operations of a government defending itself against internal insurrection.

Information from the studies of Trimble’s group firmly contradicted those claims.

Detailed evidence, including the chilling fact that 60 percent of the bodies exhumed were of children under the age of 12, demonstrated the untruths of the defense’s position.

Trimble said his final goal is to have the remains of the exhumed returned to their families.

Testing positive gets negative results

Sandra Barnes

Army Substance Abuse Program

"Is it not the Army's primary objective to restore individuals to full productive performance?"

This question will be posed to Basic Combat Training and Advanced Individual Training Soldiers after receiving notification of testing positive on a urinalysis test.

In accordance with Army Regulation 600-85, Army Substance Abuse Program, drug abuse will not be tolerated and there are serious consequences for such misbehavior.

AR 600-85 doesn't mandate discharge. However, Soldiers, including Army National Guard and Reserve, who are identified as drug abusers, without exception will:

- ° Be referred to the Army Substance Abuse Program counseling center for screening.
  - ° Be considered for disciplinary action under the UCMJ, as appropriate.
  - ° Be processed for administrative separation in accordance with Army Regulation 600-8-24 (for officers and warrant officers) and Army Regulation 635-200 (for enlisted personnel).
- Army Regulation 600-85 states that one of the objectives of the Army Substance Abuse Program is to "restore to duty those substance-impaired Soldiers who have the potential for continued military service."

One of the Army's principles is that the abuse of alcohol or illicit drugs by both military and civilian personnel is inconsistent with Army values as well as the standards of performance, discipline and readiness necessary to accomplish this mission.

The separation action will be initiated and processed through the chain of command, which will exercise discretion on a case-by-case basis in directing retention or discharge of the Soldier.

Every year commanding officers give BCT and AIT Soldiers going home for Block Leave this safety briefing: "Soldiers, you will be tested upon your return. If you test positive, you can expect negative personnel actions to be taken against you. You may be convicted of a felony, and you ultimately could be discharged." When Soldier readiness cannot happen because of substance abuse, lives are immediately put in jeopardy.

The standing order not to use illegal drugs is issued by Army leadership with Soldier safety in mind.

ASAP Calendar of Events

Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Training Program is a two-day class for those interested in learning more about alcohol and drug abuse, and will be held from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Feb. 12-13 at 3250 Sumter Ave. It is also for those who the command feels could benefit from re-education.

Unit Prevention Leader training will be held from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Feb. 21-23 at 3250 Sumter Ave. It is required training for newly assigned unit prevention leaders and includes training on drugs and alcohol, biochemical testing and substance abuse prevention. Seating is limited, and the duty uniform is required. Please do not schedule appointments during class time.

The Fort Jackson ASAP Unit Prevention Leader of the Year Award is designed to recognize outstanding performance by the best Unit Prevention Leader on Fort Jackson.

UPLs must qualify for the award by conducting a flawless urinalysis collection, passing urinalysis inspection, having a Standard Operating Procedure and providing four hours required annual training to Soldiers in their unit.

Editor's Note: The Army Substance Abuse Program provides prevention/education to the community on topics pertaining to alcohol and other drug usage. ASAP maintains a wide selection of pamphlets and videos that can be used to get a further understanding of the dynamics of substance abuse and use. ASAP staff is available to give presentations on alcohol and drug abuse. For questions about classes offered or about substance abuse, call 751-5007.

However, it's up to those Soldiers to follow those orders. Get help now.

Army Substance Abuse Program services are available for Soldiers, family members, Department of Defense civilians, retirees and reserve components while on active duty.

Editor's Note: If you have questions about issues of substance abuse, contact ASAP at 751-5007.

Legal

Stopping unsolicited mail, calls, e-mails

Capt. David M. Jones

Legal Assistance Attorney

Many military families find themselves receiving unsolicited mail, including pre-approved credit card applications, when they move to a new duty station.

How many times have you dropped whatever you were doing to run to the phone, only to be greeted by someone who you didn't know who was trying to sell you a new product?

You have a right to reduce the number of unsolicited mailings, calls and e-mails by requesting companies to remove your name from marketing lists and pre-approved credit cards, and to not sell your credit information.

Telemarketing agencies and credit card companies can easily obtain your personal information without your permission to send you pre-approved credit card applications. To opt-out of pre-approved credit offer solicitations, call (888) 5-OPTOUT (567-8688). In addition, you should also contact the following three major credit bureaus to prevent companies from sharing your name and address for promotional services:

Equifax, Inc.

Options

P.O. Box 740123
Atlanta, GA 30374-0123

Experian Consumer Opt-Out

701 Experian Parkway
Allen, TX 75013-3715

TransUnion Corporation's

Name Removal Option
P.O. Box 97328
Jackson, MS 39288-7328

Once your request is processed, your name remains on the credit bureau opt-out list indefinitely.

Telemarketing and credit card companies can also easily obtain your personal e-mail address without permission. To reduce unsolicited commercial e-mail, visit the Direct Marketing Association Web site at <http://www.e-mps.org/en/> to register online. Once your request is processed it remains in effect for one year.

The DMA also offers mail and telephone preference services to help reduce direct mail marketing and telemarketing. The DMA registers consumers for five years with direct-mail and telephone marketers. Registering with the DMA, however, does not eliminate mail from list brokers, "Dear Occupant" mailers, local merchants, charities, and professional organizations. You must contact these organizations directly to be deleted from their mailing lists.

To register with DMA, send your name, current mailing address, previous mailing address, Social Security number, telephone number, date of birth and your signature to the following addresses:

Telephone Preference Service

Direct Marketing Association
P.O. Box 9014
Farmingdale, NY 11735-9014

Mail Preference Service

Direct Marketing Association
P.O. Box 9008
Farmingdale, NY 11735-9008

Under the law, you have a right to say no to unsolicited mailings, calls, and e-mails. If telemarketers continue to contact you despite your choice to opt-out, you can file a telemarketing complaint with the Federal Trade Commission at <http://www.ftc.gov/ftc/consumer/htm>.

Cases of the Week

The Soldier was arrested based upon an outstanding warrant for Uttering a Fraudulent Check. After his arrest, the Soldier was transported to the Richland County Detention Center pending a court hearing.

A civilian was charged with Driving Too Fast for Conditions after she struck a force protection barrier while entering Gate 2.

As a result of the accident, the vehicle was inoperable and towed to an off-post facility.

A Soldier notified the military police of Larceny at his housing quarters. An investigation revealed that an unknown person(s) removed two bicycles from the Soldier's back porch.

The items were left unsecured and unattended. The estimated cost of loss was $199. If you have any information, call 751-3115/3114.

The legal limit for window tint is 27 percent.

Leadership

Chaplain (Maj.) Mark Moss
369th Adjutant General Battalion

Everybody in the Army is a leader in some capacity. You may be a noncommissioned officer or an officer who leads by a position of authority. But leadership isn't just defined by job status. Parents are leaders, and so is a private who leads by example. Almost without exception, we are all leaders in some capacity or role that we fill.

One of the biggest jobs as leaders is to develop ourselves as worthy of the respect of the Soldiers we serve, train and lead. H. Gordon Selfridge, who built one of the world's largest department stores in London, shares advice on the subject. He claims that his success was built by being a leader and not a boss. Here is his comparison of the two types of mentalities:

The boss drives his people; the leader coaches them. The boss depends on authority; the leader on good will. The boss inspires fear; the leader inspires enthusiasm. The boss says "I"; the leader, "we." The boss fixes the blame for the breakdown; the leader fixes the breakdown. The boss knows how it is done; the leader shows how. The boss says "Go"; the leader says "Let's go!"

— Sunshine Magazine

A leader takes care of those in his charge and doesn't just let things happen. He doesn't defer to the wisdom of not getting involved because it isn't his lane. He doesn't avoid hard decisions or taking sides because he dislikes conflict and the messy nature of interpersonal relationships. He doesn't let his personal feelings or perceived injuries to himself affect his impartiality and judgment. Perhaps the wisdom contained in Selfridge's advice is epitomized in these words of the Bible about servanthood;

You know that the rulers of the Gentiles lord it over them, and their high officials exercise authority over them. Not so with you. Instead, whoever wants to become great among you must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be your slave — Matthew 20:25-27

Inspiration for this model of leadership can be seen in Jesus' words and actions as a leader. Jesus said, "Greater love has no one than this: that he lay down his life for his friends."

This was followed by the action of Jesus dying for the sins of the world. The Apostle Paul says of Jesus in Philippians 2: ... in humility consider others better than yourselves ... look also to the interests of others. Your attitude should be the same as Christ Jesus: Who being in the vary nature of God, did not consider equality with God something to be grasped ... And being found in the appearance of man, he humbled himself and became obedient to death even on a cross.

This is the divine example and bench-
